1:00-2:30 Exploring Relationships: Using a relational database to explore the impact of Library resources and services on student success.

This session will explore how several Library datasets can be related to inform questions such as:

- * How does the Library impact student success?
- * How are different majors using electronic and/or print resources?
- * How are various patron groups using electronic and/or print resources?
- * What impact does library instruction have on library resource use?

Libraries have traditionally provided counts of various outputs including circulation, downloads, instruction sessions and others. This session will explore the means to and benefits of connecting these internal datasets to create a deeper understanding of how our services are used by and impact our various stakeholders. We will also look at how these internal datasets can be related to institutional data such as student performance to explore the relationship between library use and student success. The session will end with a discussion to explore the specific interests of the audience.
